Textile Industry Museum of the Ave River Basin
Besides the historical context of the Ave River Basin industrialization, and a particular focus on people’s labour experiences, namely in the cotton industry, this museum has a fascinating exhibition of working historical textile machines, from spinning to weaving, among others.

National Railway Museum – Lousado Centre
Installed in the Companhia dos Caminhos de Ferro de Guimarães (Guimarães Railway Company) (1883-1927) original building, the museum is today an important element of the Portuguese industrial archaeology, due to the quality and uniqueness of its estate. The locomotives, wagons and exhibited vehicles were built between 1875 and 1965, therefore representing almost a century of Railway History. It integrates the European Route of Industrial Heritage (ERIH).

Automobile Museum
The Automobile Museum of Vila Nova de Famalicão is a representation of the evolution of automobile design and technique throughout the 20th century. The Museum exhibits a collection that belongs to several owners, holding about 130 cars and old motorcycles of different brands, models and periods. Within such a vast collection of relics with wheels and engine, the museum highlights the Ford-T, the first car ever to be produced in series, as well as a VEL microcar, the only one of its kind in the world, and two unique copies of a Rolls Royce model.

These places are a must visit to better understand the process of industrialization over time.
